1000 More Men Added at Fort Devens
5000 Now at Work on New Buildings; C. C. C. Depot to Leave (Special to The Sun)
FORT DEVENS, Oct. 31.—The past two days have witnessed another period of heavy employment with close to 1000 men being added to the payroll of the contractors who are engaged in erecting the barracks and other buildings to house the First division. Carpenters and laborers were in the majority of those engaged with ironworkers, molders, truck drivers, masons and other equipment operators comprising the balance of those hired. This brings the number of men now working directly for the contractors to about 4500, and with those employed by the various sub-contractors makes a total of approximately 5000 employed on the huge project. Five of the lighting towers, having 30 lamps of 1500 watts each, with large reflectors, have been put into operation, and in the areas served by each tower the men are able to work as handily as those employed on the day shift. A civilian police headquarters has been erected with direct telephone communication with the outside, and the force has now been increased to 45 men, with two officers cruising the area on motorcycles and a police truck placed at the disposal of the special department. Moves to Lawrence. The quartermaster department of the fort will lose a division of its activities that has functioned here since 1933 when the Civilian Conservation corps supply depot is transferred to Lawrence, some time within the next month. This branch of the quartermaster department, which is manned by civilian employees, will be located in buildings of the Pacific mills at Lawrence, necessitating those now employed to take up residence in Lawrence, or commute by automobile, to keep their present positions. The majority of those employed are local residents. From this supply depot is issued the clothing, equipment and other supplies needed at all of the C. C. C. camps throughout the First Corps area, which comprises the New England states.
